

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention provides methods of detecting cancerous cells in biological samples using a double staining/dual imaging approach, which can be used to diagnose cancer. More specifically, the present invention provides methods of diagnosing bladder cancer by a simultaneous scanning of cell morphology and FISH signals of cells derived from a urine sample.